What happens when a world leader in highly engineered automotive powertrain components teams up with North America's leader in competitive energy supply? For BorgWarner, the answer is electrifying results. That's what the manufacturer found when it selected Constellation NewEnergy to provide three of its Midwestern facilities with more than 15 megawatts of electricity annually. While producing precision components and systems for the world's largest auto manufacturers, BorgWarner can rely on Constellation for a dependable energy supply and customized energy solutions based on its unmatched knowledge of the energy market. Now that's a partnership equipped with the drive to succeed.
